Implementing the goals of the Bologna declaration means a completely new organization of study programmes, working conditions and the production of knowledge aiming at the harmonization of the European Scientific Area. The new entrepreneurial university is making efforts to increase economic efficiency, transparency and to offer new forms of services in academic teaching and research. More or less vehement debates deal with the question if and to which extent this process will change the original character of academic education and science. Gender research however, is especially interested in the influence of the restructuring process on gender relations. In which way do rationalization and reorganization of the universities and of the universities of applied sciences delengender academic teaching and research? Where is gender research positioned now? Researchers from European and non-European countries will respond to these problems/questions which seem to be unsolved so far.

Aus dem Inhalt

with contributions by Birgit Riegraf, Brigitte Aulenbacher, Edit Kirsch-Auwärter, Ursula Müller, Joan Acker, Louise Morley, Stephanie Zuber, Hildegard Matthies, Elisabeth Berg, Brigitte Liebig, Ilse Lenz, Jutta Weber, Karin Zimmermann, Gabriele Griffin, Karin Gottschall, Gudrun Ehler, Sabine Hark, Angelika Wetterer, Sue Rosser, Michael Meuser, Elisabeth Maurer, Katrin Hansen, Heike Kahler et al.

Zielgruppe

Lehrende und Studierende aus den Bereichen der Organisations-, Arbeits- und Hochschulforschung Gleichstellungsbeauftragte

Autor / Herausgeber

Prof. Dr. Birgit Riegraf teaches and is doing research in sociology at the Department of Cultural Sciences at the University of Paderborn.

Prof. Dr. Brigitte Aulenbacher is Head of the Department of Theoretical Sociology and Social Analysis at the Faculty of Sociology at the University of Linz.

Dr. Edit Kirsch-Auwärter is Equal Opportunity Commissioner at the University of Göttingen and Head of the Equal Opportunities Office there.

Prof. Dr. Ursula Müller represents the Gender Studies at the Faculty of Sociology of the Bielefeld University and she is Director of the Interdisciplinary Center for Women's and Gender Studies (Interdisziplinäres Zentrum für Frauen- und Geschlechterforschung, IFF).

Internetressourcen / E-Mails

E-Mailadresse des Autors
> Birgit.riegrhof@uni-bielefeld.de

© Springer Fachmedien Wiesbaden GmbH